

Notch Mountain Lake of 83.2 surface acres lies on Revillagigedo I Island at elevation 1050 ft. between Thorne Arm and Lucky Cove.
The area surrounding it is of sub-alpine type and scrub timber.
The water is dark with organic stain. The watershed is small being only 557 acres. There are impassable falls in the outlet. The lake runs to depths in excess of 75 ft. The shores are bedrock, steep and overhung with brush. It was planted with steelhead fry in 1961.
Kit

Two nets were fished in this lake for four days and held 3 rainbow trout on August 29. One of these fell out of the net and was lost altho it was the same size as another held onto. The larger was 17¹³.25 in. long and had spawned twice as a 5 year old. The other was 8¹¹.75 in. long and showed 2 annuli on the scales. This is not one of the better fishing lakes of the Ketchikan Area and it is reputed to get little fishing pressure. Access is by float plane at the present time.
